Unused bins never assembled are each priced at $106.83 for bins of 1,187 bushel capacity. Second-hand bins which have been erected for use but now empty cost $83.09. The prices are for bins at their present location.

These prices, according to Byron Gaskill, county AAA chairman, are based on rates of 9 cents a bushel, manufacturer's rated capacity for unused bins, and 7 cents a bushel for second-hand bins.

What Can I Do?

The following is a portion of a radio address extended into the congressional record by Congressman Lewis D. Thill Wisconsin.

"Frequently people write their Congressman asking what they can do to help keep America at peace. If you are among the vast majority of real Americans who want peace, who put their flag and their country ahead of any other, if you are really Americans first, last, and all the time, you can win this fight if you will work for peace one-hundredth as hard as you must work if we get into war. Here are some specific things you can do if you really want peace and are willing to work for it.

1. Take the movies for example; can let your theater manager know you will not support his place of business if he persists in putting war propaganda on his screen; you can also assure the loyal American theater manager who does not use his theater as a sounding board for the war propagandists that you will patronize him.

2. When you hear radio commentators trying to propagandize for war write the companies sponsoring them and register your protest. When you hear commentators who are fair and honest, send your encouragement to their commercial sponsors.

There are many more things you can do to offset the millions of dollars the war crowd is spending in an effort to stir up your emotions or confuse your judgement to the point where you will be forced to send your sons to die fighting in Russia, China or Africa.

3. You can and should write the President a personal letter asking him not to break his contract with you, asking him to keep the good faith with you and to fulfill his freely and frequently given promises to keep this country out of war.

4. You should write to your two Senators often and frankly ask them to become active in the fight against the war-propaganda machine.

5. You should write your Representative and tell him that you want more than just his vote against war and his vote against further steps into war; tell him you depend upon him to render real service in this hour of need by taking an active part in the peoples' fight to protect and preserve the peace of America.

"Letters reaching Washington are being carefully read these days, both in the White House and in every office on Capitol Hill. A recent poll shows a 3 per cent increase in the sentiment against our entering the war. It shows that the war crowd has begun to lose ground despite its expensive campaign to stampede confused Americans into another foreign war. Your efforts have produced results and you should now devote increased time to the task of defeating the war propagandists once and for all. Opposition to war here in Washington is gaining ground every day. Many who a few months ago were weakly saying, 'We are in the war', are now convinced that America can win its fight to stay out of the war. If America responds with an emphatic 'no' to the enticements of the foreign agents, the communistic 'fifth columnists', and the war promoters, we can be sure that never again in our history will public men seriously suggest that we send our sons to fight and die for a foreign cause. I cannot impress upon you too strongly how effective the people's crusade for peace has become and how important it is that you do your part with personal letters to hold the gains for peace which have been made."

Any congressman or senator who is with the war crowd in Washington must be decisively defeated if he comes up for re-election. America needs men in Congress, not a bunch of rubber stamps, war mongers and royalty worshippers. At present we have only a handful of real American men in congress and they are doing a heroic job against great odds in preserving America for us as the founding fathers designed America to be.

NEW LENOX MEN'S BOWLING LEAGUE PLAN FOR 1941-42 LEAGUE

The New Lenox Men's Bowling League held a meeting in the A. O. Bruns barber shop last Friday evening and tentative plans were made for the formation of the 1941-42 League. Only eight of last year's team sponsors were present; and in order to get the new league under way, they must all be present. If at the next meeting which is to be held in the Bruns barbershop, Friday evening, August 15th, none of the sponsors or at least a representative is present, they will not be listed as members of the league.

Both sponsors and representatives of last year's league and those desiring to join this year's league, must have their teams made up at this meeting. Also at this meeting, the rules and regulations of the league will be further discussed and decided. There are 12 teams in the league from last year and they bowl on Friday nights. It is expected that there will be at least 18 teams in the league this year. Six new teams are to be organized.

Provisions have been made to have an Auxiliary League to bowl Tuesday nights to take care of all teams over the 12 that will bowl on Friday night. There will be sponsors for all teams in this year's league. Last year's sponsors as in last year's league were: Royal Blue Store, Wilbur's Service Station, I. G. A. Store, New Lenox Motor Service, Otto Service Station, Bruns Barber Shop, Rube Tart's Tavern, James Sherwood Restaurant, Fitzer Dairy, and New Lenox Coal and Feed Co. Tentatively new comers to the league will be New Lenox Bank, New Lenox Lumber Co., O'Daniels Drug Store, Three Duces Tavern, Anchor Tavern and Cities Service Oil Co.

Don't forget the meeting August 15. Team sponsors or at least a representative must be present if the team is to be entered in this year's bowling league.

Fathers Hear Complaints

The Mokena Village Board had a very interesting meeting Tuesday evening. First, they heard a complaint from Robert Gaddis against the Robinson Tavern charging the latter with violating the closing hours. Taverns in the Mokena incorporate limits must close 12 o'clock mid-night every night with the exception of Saturday night when they can operate until 1 a. m. Mr. Gaddis in his complaint charged the tavern mentioned has been keeping open way past this closing time. He further charged that the night soft ball games open at 10 o'clock and continue until mid-night and after. He further complained that a juke box has been playing so loud that the entire neighborhood has been kept awake at night.

The Village Board instructed the village clerk to notify the proprietors of this tavern to observe the closing hours and to abate the matters complained of. It was suggested that the soft ball games be run earlier so as to be through before mid-night.

Next Roy Krapp had a complaint that he had received a water bill for $235 for using over a million gallons of water the past year and he protested, saying he did not use this amount of water, the highest ever known for an individual resident in the village.

The board discovered that the meter was at fault and ordered Mr. Krapp to install a new meter and agreed to adjust his water bill on the basis of water readings of previous years.

Edward Laffy also had a high water bill, the last reading showing a consumption of 50,000 gallons in a year. As Mr. Laffy has a small family, and does not use the water for garden sprinkling, it was deemed best to check the meter to see whether it is defective or not.

Irvin Howes asked the board to provide police aid to regulate the traffic on Wednesday nights during the showing of the out door movies. Complaint was made to the board that many rowdies come out and pull off many disgusting sights as well as driving carelessly and recklessly. The board decided that if these out door movies are going to cause the village extra expense to maintain order, then the movies should be dispensed with. The board will, however, endeavor to curb the nuisances complained of as long as the movies are in operation this summer.

The board had a report on the completion of the water main extension on Wolf Road. Davidson & Doctor, of Orland Park, the contractors were paid over three-fourths of their contract price.

The board also passed the annual tax levy ordinance providing for village taxes for the ensuing year.

Farm Income to Pass Ten Billion For Current Year

Elements Are Government Loans, Purchases and Consumer Demand.

By FRANK GEORGE

(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

WASHINGTON. — Farmers have the best financial outlook in more than a decade. Prices of farm products are the highest since 1937, and farm cash income from crops and live stock will be the largest since 1929. Costs of farm production also have risen, but in smaller amount than the rise in prices and prospective farm income.

Federal agricultural economists have estimated that farm income will exceed 10 billions of dollars this year. This compares with slightly more than 9 billions in 1940, and with more than 11 billions in 1929. The estimate for 1941 is more than twice the total of farm income of less than 5 billion dollars at the bottom of the economic depression in 1932.

Farm income prospects have been raised this year by the continuing high consumer demand for farm products, the large government purchases of farm products in the Food-for-Defense program, and by recent federal legislation increasing to 85 per cent of parity the rate of government loans on basic farm commodities.

Estimates are that the increase in government loans will add more than $500,000,000 to farm income this year. This figure is included in the estimated $10,000,000,000 of total cash income. The higher loans will raise the income of cotton growers by about $225,000,000 this year over last, and of wheat growers by an equivalent amount.

Cotton Income to Lag.

It is pointed out, however, by federal agricultural officials, that whereas the income of wheat growers will be larger than it was in 1929, the income of cotton growers will be much smaller than it was in that year. Cash income from wheat marketed or put under government loan will total $670,000,000 this year, as compared with $727,000,000 in 1929. The addition of government conservation and parity payments will raise the income of wheat growers above the 1929 total.

Cash income of cotton growers—from marketings and the cotton put under government loan—may total close to $900,000,000 this year. This compares with more than $1,500,000,000 in 1929. Cotton growers also will receive government conservation and parity payments, but not enough to make up the difference between 1941 and 1929 incomes. The much smaller income of cotton growers is accounted for largely by the loss of export markets.

The United States department of agriculture reports that crops and live stock began the 1941 season in unusually good condition, then ran into a period of drought that seriously threatened the Food-for-Defense program, but recently have been doing better. Total farm production may be a little larger this year than last, even though the production of hogs, pork, and lard is smaller.

The federal agricultural expansion program calls for increased production of dairy and poultry products, of canning crops, and dry beans. For a number of months past, the dairy industry has been setting high production records in the output of milk and manufactured products. Poultry and egg output also will be much larger during the last half of this year, than in the same period of 1940.

Beef to Increase.

Hog producers are being urged to increase the breeding of sows and to feed hogs to heavier weights. The pig crop was smaller this spring than last, but a sizable increase is expected this fall in view of government assurances as to minimum prices and the favorable ratio of corn and hog prices. Cattlemen are being advised to increase the marketings of cattle this year, and an increase of about 5 per cent in the supply of beef is in prospect.

The latest federal analysis of economic conditions is that the demand for farm products continues to be influenced by the increase in industrial activity and the accompanying rise in consumer buying power.

The government specialists report that prospects are "good" for the production of feed crops this year, and that the total supply of feed may be larger this year than last. They look for a slight increase in production of fats, oils, and oilseeds, but the demand for these commodities is increasing, and prices are much higher this summer than last.

The supply of fruits may be slightly larger this year than last, but the money returns to producers likely will be larger in view of the steadily rising consumer buying power.

Eastern Indian Uprising in War Dance

"East Meets West" this month when 36 Indian tribes join in colorful pageantry, symbolic of their life before their white brother touched the shores of America. The redmen gather at Gallup, N. M., August 13-16, not in solemn conclave to smoke the pipe of peace with the "paleface," neither to prove that Mark Twain was wrong, but to don feathers and war paint for a championship Inter-Tribal Indian ceremonial contest. From out of misty American history, these bronzed phantom-like figures will again dance to the throb of crude war drums and the exhortations of their weird medicine-men. This is the first challenge ever flung, by New York's historic tribe, the Iroquois, to the west and south tribes.

GALLUP, N. M.—Leading ceremonial dancers of the Six Nations of the Iroquois, New York state's historic tribes, have for the first time challenged the 30-odd Southwestern tribes to meet them during the Inter-Tribal Indian ceremonial to be held at Gallup, N. M., the Indian Capital, August 13-16, to compete before a group of Indian judges in any Indian ceremonial dances common to both East and West, for the title of Champion Indian Ceremonial Dancers of North America.

The Ceremonial board was surprised that any Eastern tribes would challenge the colorful ceremonies of Western Indians who have been influenced so little by white penetration of their country. Many of the Western Indians do not speak English and their point of view and customs are known to be strictly Indian as they were before the coming of the white man.

Chief Big Kettle of Buffalo, N. Y., declares that neither time nor education has interfered with the excellence of the steps, rhythm, song or costume of the Eastern Indians who will show their ceremonies for the first time before the crowds at the twentieth annual Indian Ceremonial at Gallup.

Tribal leaders of the Zuni Indians, who many believe to be the most authentic and finished dancers of the West, and of the Navajos, Apaches, Lagunas, Hopis, Acomas and a score of other Western tribes are anxious to meet the Eastern Indians at the Ceremonial, which will decide the championship, before a competent Indian board of judges.

Canada Represented.

Chief Big Kettle will be accompanied by a group composed of Senecas, Onondagas, Mohicans, Mohawks, Iroquois and Cayugas from New York and Canada. Well-known dance leaders among the visitors will be Awl Breaker Cayuga, who is solo dance champion of New York and Canada, Chief Big Kettle, past champion, and Chief Corn Planter, Ceremonial chief of the Six Nations.

Each year the best and finest is presented at the Ceremonial in centuries-old games, arts and handicrafts, and all that is most beautiful and impressive in the spiritual and ethical life of the Indian tribes inhabiting the isolated mountain and desert reservations in the far South-west.

Renowned Medicine men, dancers and singers of the 30-odd nomadic and pueblo tribes gather at Gallup to perform ancient ceremonial dances and rites of the various tribes.

Each year the Ceremonial association offers cash awards in a consistent effort to encourage Indian craftsmen to adhere to the best traditions of their race and to continually improve their workmanship and the entries for these awards are exhibited in the great Exhibit Hall.

Foot races, horse races, bucking contests, calf-tying, games and the presence of thousands of tribesmen and their families add to the interest in the event.

Grandmothers Club Grows Nationally

CHICAGO.—One of the country's unique organizations, the "National Grandmothers Club, Inc.," has reached a membership of nearly 2,000, numbering its members either in branch clubs or at large in nearly every state in the Union.

Heading the women's department of the Baltimore & Ohio R. R. in Chicago, Mrs. Brown, shown above, also heads, as president, the National Grandmothers Club, Inc., with headquarters in the same city. They have a national membership of nearly 2,000. The members unite for educational and charitable work among children and for local civic enterprises. They also urge a more modern life for present-day grandmothers.

four grandchildren and she is giving all her spare time to extending the work of the National Grandmothers club. One of the chief benefits of the organization is the new zest for life which it has brought to many grandmothers, especially the modern grandmother who doesn't wish to sit all day long in an easy chair, but who in dress and general appearance, is more youthful and active than grandmother was.

Wherever Grandmother clubs exist they participate in the work of their communities along civic lines and are non-sectarian and non-political.

Mrs. Brown was speaking to a gathering of business women in Godfrey, Ill., in 1936, when a telegram brought the news that she was a grandmother. She asked for a showing of hands of the grandmothers present. Next morning she entertained them at breakfast. On two subsequent years they met again at breakfast and then the National Grandmothers Club, Inc., was organized.

Hitchhiker Gives Advice to Tyros

Smile and Pick New Car Is Winning Formula.

SAN ANTONIO.—Kenneth Crosswell has some ideas about hitchhiking. And he ought to know. He's "hitched" more than 27,000 miles, or the distance around the earth, in three years of shuttling back and forth between his home and St. Mary's university.

He has made 18 round trips between St. Mary's here in San Antonio and his home in Warren, Ark., and each trip totaled about 1,500 miles.

Giving some pointers on hitchhiking, Crosswell, a junior and an ace basketball player at the school, warns the novice not to select beforehand a specific route but just keep going in the general direction of his destination. After you get within 100 miles or so of where you are going, he says, then you can get particular about the route.

Crosswell advises the hiker to wear a semi-military uniform if possible, to carry some kind of identification such as a placard showing his destination, to travel alone, to show a smile while thumbing a ride and to be courteous and interested in whatever the driver chooses for discussion.

New cars are best for thumbers, Crosswell says, because they're usually going good distances at fast speeds. However, if there are two or three people in the car already, it's useless to thumb since most drivers pick up hikers either to get relief from driving or to have someone to talk to in order to keep awake.

As for expenses, Crosswell estimates that a one-way trip has cost him on the average 25 cents. He estimates that there are some 500,000 college students who use hitchhiking as their customary mode of travel. These students are hurt by those who use hitchhiking for crime. Since hikers have robbed and murdered drivers, some states have a ban on hitchhiking, but Crosswell believes these laws too difficult to enforce.

Wedding Ring Luckily

Is Found in Bomb Ruins

LONDON.—Hilda Cross and Leslie Booker, London sweethearts, planned a quiet wedding.

No guests, no reception, no breakfast, a quiet ceremony in a quiet little church off the main road.

But on wedding eve, Hilda said to her mother: "I'm too excited. I cannot sleep. Something's going to happen."

Something did. Lots of things. Soon after dark, bombs began to fall. There was a heavy gunfire. This was a big raid. Near midnight, there was a hammering at the door of the Cross home.

Hilda opened the door, saw a wild figure, with face covered with blood and dust.

"Bombed out," Booker said. "But mom and dad are all right." At daylight on wedding morning, bride and groom began poking in the ruins of the Bookers' home. They rescued the groom's wallet, searched it feverishly, found the ring and ran home.

Booker found his best trousers in the next door garden, brushed them up for the wedding.

Then, at 2:30 in the afternoon the ceremony took place. Very quietly.

Mother Saves Daughter, 2, From Drowning in Well

TUPELO, MISS.—When her baby fell into 11 feet of water, in a 40-foot well, 25-year-old Mrs. Boyd Goodson—who can't swim—plunged in and held the infant afloat until rescuers came.

The mother squeezed through a foot-square opening to go after the two-year-old girl, which she snatched from under the water. Lying on her back with feet braced against one side of the concrete shaft and her shoulders against the other, she shook the child until its breath was restored.

A youth descended and the mother and child were pulled to safety.

Four Accidents in Row Discourage Group of 8

PORTALES, N. M.—Eight Dora, N. M., residents learned that sometimes the try, try again method doesn't work and after four consecutive accidents they quit trying.

Starting for a dance in four cars, the group's troubles began when they had to abandon the first car because of a blowout. A double smashup put the next two cars out of commission and the eight people piled into the remaining car.

When it hit a slick piece of highway and turned over, they decided to quit. They took an ambulance into Portales.

Rapid Heart Often Due to Nervousness

By DR. JAMES W. BARTON
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

WHEN an individual is sitting quietly and his heart suddenly begins to beat very rapidly—twice as fast as normal—he is naturally going to become worried. Just as suddenly as the rapidity started up, it stops, and the heart rate is back to 72 or 76 again. When the heart beats rapidly, it is called tachycardia—"tachy," meaning fast, and "cardia" the heart. When the rapid beat occurs suddenly, lasts for minutes or hours, and stops suddenly, it is called paroxysmal tachycardia.

While the cause of paroxysmal tachycardia is said to be unknown, the cause in some cases is believed to be nervousness, disappointment, worry or some other depressing emotion. I have one case in mind of a teacher who had worked and planned for two years to take a certain trip and at the last moment circumstances prevented his trip.

From that time he began to have attacks of paroxysmal tachycardia which were controlled by the drug quinidine sulphate, now in general use for these attacks. Others state that these attacks occur when they have to do some special work or duty which is unfamiliar or distasteful.

Attacks Not Dangerous. The treatment of this common type of rapid heartbeat is to assure the patient that there is no danger to life. This assurance is often all that is necessary to prevent further attacks. These attacks can sometimes be stopped by pressing on the nerves of the neck running along the "cord" which runs from back of ear to breast bone.

However, in some forms of tachycardia where there is also some disturbance of regularity (rhythm), of the heartbeat, rest in bed is absolutely necessary, in addition to the quinidine sulphate. The thought then is when the heart suddenly begins to beat rapidly, is not to become frightened, but to send for your physician. If it is the common type, he can prescribe the quinidine sulphate.

Neurology And Psychiatry

IN MY student days there was not much instruction given on "behavior" problems, or psychiatry.

Today most neurologists combine with psychiatry (knowledge of nerves) the study of behavior (psychiatry) and are thus qualified to tell us when the symptoms are due to a disturbance of the nerves themselves or whether the emotions, circumstances, surroundings are affecting the individual's judgment and so affecting his behavior.

When there is no real disturbance or change in the structure of the nerves or nerve tissue, yet the individual behaves abnormally, the condition is called a neurosis.

A simple classification of the neuroses is outlined by Dr. A. L. MacKinnon, Homewood sanitarium, Guelph, in the Canadian Medical Association Journal. This classification makes it easy for us to understand such common conditions as neurasthenia, hypochondriasis, hysteria, psychasthenia and anxiety states.

1. Neurasthenia: A condition of mental and physical tiredness.

2. Hypochondriasis: A hypochondriac is a patient who has the fixed idea that he is suffering from organic disease, when no disease is present.

3. Hysteria: Where patient thinks he cannot walk, cannot remember, throws himself about but never hurts himself because he is conscious—not unconscious as in epilepsy.

4. Psychasthenia: "Psych" means mind or nervous system, "a" means not, and "thenia" means strength; thus mind or nerves are not strong and there are thus fears, obsessions, a feeling that he "must" do certain things.

5. Anxiety states: A continuous state of anxiety with rapid or hard beating of the heart, breathlessness, nausea and vomiting, and diarrhoea.

'Joint Return' Income Tax Law Would Hit High-Salaried Class ... Wheeler, Hoover Attitude Toward Russia Reviewed.

(Bell Syndicate—WNU Service.)

WASHINGTON.—Congress is expected to vote the "joint return" provision into the new tax law. This means that after this husbands and wives will no longer be permitted to submit separate returns, but MUST file one for both of them.

Most people seem to think that this is important only to California and the other states that have the "community property" law. This is the law that assumes a wife owns half of her husband's income.

It has been a sore point with the tax experts in the treasury department and on Capitol Hill for years that married couples with large incomes in these states—particularly California because there are so many big incomes in the movie colony—were getting away with this. But the states involved were very important, politically, and nothing ever has been done about it.

Actually, the change in the law will not hurt the small taxpayer. It will hurt only the big ones. Under the old law, the married man got an exemption of $2,500, whereas if he and his wife filed separate returns each got only $1,000. So for the small income family it was obviously better to file a joint return. The couple had $500 more exemption.

High Brackets Different

But this ceased to be true the moment the income reached the higher brackets. Then by splitting the income somewhere nearly in two equal parts, neither part reached brackets as high as the joint income for both would have. Hence, the RATE of tax on the whole of the two incomes of the husband and wife would average considerably less.

What has not been generally appreciated, even in congress, was that it was not just the movie stars in Hollywood who were benefiting by this separate return racket—it was rich people all over the country. There were numerous cases of enormous savings on income taxes by big income folks in New York, Chicago, Philadelphia; in fact, every city in the country. There were thousands of cases in Florida, where so many rich people have their official residence and from which they file their income tax returns, because Florida happens to have no state income tax.

Hoover, Wheeler Attitude On Soviet Russia

Writing for the Democratic national committee Charles Michelson resents the attacks of Herbert Hoover and Sen. Burton K. Wheeler of Montana on U. S. aid to Russia. It is nothing new for Michelson to attack Hoover. It was the campaign conducted by Michelson, under the auspices of John J. Raskob and J. Edgar Hoover, which is generally accredited with doing more than any other two or three things to make Hoover so easy to beat in 1932.

It is only since the Supreme court packing fight that the Michelson pen has been turned against Wheeler. More in sorrow than in anger, doubtless, Michelson recalls Wheeler's attitude toward Russia BEFORE the Hitler invasion of the Soviet.

In 1930, Michelson recalls, Wheeler, after a long tour of Russia, wrote a series of articles which were later reprinted in the Congressional Record. He quotes this "conclusion" by the Montana senator at that time:

"Russia for 13 years has maintained a stable government—much more stable than have most of the South American and Latin countries. They have maintained order within their borders. . . . They have met promptly the obligations incurred by them since they came into power. . . . By all the rules of international law and practice they are entitled to recognition."

Michelson thought that was fine, then. Apparently he still does though he does not say much about that any more. He now takes the more practical ground.

Practical Aspect

"Perhaps in view of the potentialities of the Russo-German war," he writes, "the importance of material aid to the Soviet outfit will be appreciated. It amounts to a great deal more than our distaste for Bolshevism, or Bolshevik habits, customs or excesses—which have no more to do with what the defense of America demands, than Joe Stalin's pipe or complexion."

Actually, President Roosevelt has been accused often of leaning too much to the ideals of the Soviet Republic. And it has not been so many years since Wheeler was accused of being a Communist at heart, if not in fact.

But there is no doubt in the minds of some of the severest critics of this alleged excessive sympathy with the Communists on the part of the administration that we should not slap down anyone who is fighting on what is actually OUR side in this war.

Vanished Men

INSTALLMENT THREE

THE STORY SO FAR: Bound for the Chibougamau gold country, six men lost their lives on the Nottaway river. Red Malone, Garrett Finlay, brother of one of the six, and Blaise, half-breed guide, arrive at Nottaway posing as survivors.

Reflected in the mirror behind the counter Finlay saw a pair of sinister eyes watching the two through a window. He yawned, stretched and sauntered to the door. "Wait a minute, Batoche!" he called to the man who was moving away. "What's your hurry?"

The half-breed swung around and snarled: "You spik to me?"

Reaching the waiting Batoche, he announced: "I've just had a wire from Ottawa. I'm ordered to map Waswanipi on my way to the bay."

Finlay watched the astonishment on Batoche's scarred face shift to a covert look of satisfaction. "You go to Waswanipi, eh?"

"Yes, and we'll need another man. I thought possibly you, yourself, would take the job if Isadore could spare you. How about it?"

"I got damn good job!" snorted the furious half-breed.

"Well, then," said Finlay, affably, "how about Tete-Blanche? He knows the lake and would make a good man for the survey."

"You—your know Tete-Blanche?"

"Huh! know him? I knew him long before he went to work for Isadore! If you see him before I do tell him his old friend Finlay asked about him." Leaving the dumb-founded Batoche working his jaw in a futile attempt to voice his thoughts, Garry turned and entered the store. "I guess that'll give M'sieu' Batoche something to chew on," he muttered.

There was raw terror in Cotter's face as he whispered: "Tete-Blanche! Why, he's Isadore's—"

The storekeeper gaped at Finlay as if he thought him demented.

"Isadore's what, Mr. Cotter?"

Cotter shook his head, waving his hands aimlessly. "You're crazy, man—plumb crazy!" he exploded.

"Where did you ever hear of Tete-Blanche?"

"Why, he's an old friend of mine."

McLeod sat at the telegraph key as Finlay entered the station. "Good morning, Mr. Finlay!" he greeted. "Off today?"

"McLeod," returned Garry, "you may be surprised to hear that early this morning you handed me a wire from my department chief, at Ottawa, directing me to change my plans and first run a compass survey of the Waswanipi chain of lakes before proceeding to the Bay."

The Scotchman scowled. "Oh, I have, have I? Well, I haven't!"

"You can deny I got that wire, but I wouldn't—if I were you!"

"What did you do to him, Blaise?"

asked Garry, when he and Malone reached the river shore with their bags.

"I tell dat Batoche he mus' be crazy. Flambeau navare talk wid me last night."

"That must have pleased him!" chuckled Red.

"First he was ver' cross. Den he offer me big pay."

"What did you say?"

"I say too small, I get t'ousand dollar a mont' wid you. He was like wild man. I laugh at him and he pull dat gun. But he was foolish. He stand too close."

Blaise produced a snub-nosed automatic from his pocket. "Here's his gun!"

Shortly, from the steel bridge, two men with heads together watched the canoe start down river and disappear behind a bend.

CHAPTER III

For a hundred miles, after passing through Lake Shabogama, the Nottaway thrashed itself to foam in rock-scarred reaches of broken water or narrowed to slide past timbered hills as it raced off the Height-of-Land. "Allons! We go!"

Down the flume into the white chaos leaped the Peterboro. On either side boulders pushed up their granite bulk where the river burst to fling spray high in air. Eddies and cross-currents sucked at her keel. Knife-edged ledges that would rip out her bottom snarled beneath the broken water. One mistake and canoe and men would be sucked into the maw of the thundering river to be spewed up and cast ashore, battered and broken, miles below.

Drenched to the bone, battling all ways for the safety of the black water, the crew ran the Peterboro to the first bend.

"We're through the worst of it!" panted Red, as they snubbed the boat to study the river below.

"Good channel ahead!"

As he spoke the whip-lash crack of rifles broke through the din of the rapids.

"We're ambushed!" cried Red.

"They're on that point! Come on!"

Finlay caught the blue haze of smokeless powder hanging in the alders of the right shore. The canoe was trapped!

Blaise lifted his pole with a shout. "Let her run!"

Like a galloping horse the Peterboro plunged down the narrow channel. Again and again rifles exploded on the shore. Suddenly the bowman sagged to his knees while his pole slipped from his limp fingers. "Blaise is hit!" cried the desperate Finlay. "Get him, Red, before he goes overboard! I'll hold her!"

The kneeling Brassard moved his head from side to side as if to clear his brain as Red caught him and eased him to the floor of the canoe. The blue lips in the gray face framed the words: "Dey got us!" Then he lost consciousness.

As if it were a chip, a cross-current snatched the canoe from the control of the straining sternman, blinded by bursting spray, and whirled her. Straddling Blaise's body Malone battled to head the boat back into the channel. As he thrust with all his magnificent power his spruce pole slowly bowed into an arc, but the river had its way. The boat did not swing. The pole splintered in his hands. As he lurched back to escape a head-long plunge into the boiling water. Again the rifles roared on the shore. Garry felt a sting like the stab of hot iron as his right leg went limp. "They've got me!" he muttered. Savagely clamping his teeth, he managed to brace himself and follow Red's lead.

Finlay prayed that he might hold on until they reached the bend.

The shots from the distant point grew fainter. The range was long and they were going wide. Finlay's leg was numb but, propped against the gunwale, it still wobbled under him. "Shooting men out of canoes," he panted, "even on the Nottaway! Worse than I guessed! Did Batoche pass us in the night on the lake or is it someone else?" He wondered if they had lost Blaise, loyal old Blaise, fearless there in the bow.

"Where was he hit?" called Garry, fearful of the answer.

"In the head!" came the sorrowful reply.

Garry's leg suddenly went limp. In spite of his efforts, he sagged to his knees. "They got me in the leg, Red," he called. "We've got to land!"

"You hit hard, Garry?"

"Through the thigh! No big arteries, I guess! Let's get Blaise ashore!"

With fear in their hearts they examined Blaise's blood-caked head.

"Glory be!" cried the giant as he traced the course of the bullet. "They only creased him!"

"Get some water, Red! His pulse is good. If he hadn't got a fracture, he'll be as right as rain in a few days. He's tough."

When they had washed and bandaged Brassard's head, Red inspected Garry's leg. "Straight through the thigh muscles clean as a whistle! Not an artery touched. That was a high-powered small bore. Pain any?"

"Not much! It's just numb and weak."

Shortly Red had his two wounded friends on a spread blanket.

Working like the moose he was, Malone soon had cargo and canoe through the alders and back in the bush. The hidden camp was now safe from searching eyes on the opposite shore. Then Garry and Red held a council of war.

"What's your guess, Red?"

There was an ugly glitter in the blue eyes as they shifted from Garry's bandaged leg to the still unconscious Blaise. "I don't think Batoche and Flambeau could have passed us last night and done this. It was someone else. How about this Tete-Blanche? Do you suppose he's putting in the summer on the Nottaway?"

"Who knows? All we have is the knowledge that someone tried to wipe out a government survey party. That means they'll pay through the nose to Ottawa. After this thing today it's clear what became of Bob and the rest who started for Chibougamau."

"Well, as they've started the rough stuff," said Red, finishing the the rapids of the Nottaway river. The name of Isadore, rich fur man, when brought by Finlay, causes an immediate cessation of conversation. While questioning Cotter, the storekeeper, Finlay noticed someone watching them.

"They won't work in the open, Red. It will all be Injun stuff, under cover, with no surviving witnesses. They're blocking the Chibougamau Trail but they don't intend to hang for it."

"And I don't intend they shall, Garry!" growled Red.

Garry loved Red's weakness for a fight and his berserk courage when he was in one, but he cautioned: "Remember we're a peaceable survey party interested in certain other matters on the side. We can't make the first move."

"Sure, boss, but while we're running that compass survey of Waswanipi, I'm going to make a personal survey of Mr. Jules Isadore. If I find what I think I will, it'll be a sweet job."

"And a dangerous one, Red."

"Uh-huh! And a dangerous one!" grunted Malone.

In the morning Blaise was conscious. Six days of rest and careful nursing put him on his feet and gave the clean flesh wound in Garry's leg a chance to heal. In the meantime Malone had swum the river below the rapids and found in the mud at the foot of the old Indian portage the tracks of two men and freshly broken brush where a canoe had been cached. At the head of the carry, footprints indicated that the men had come downstream. Batoche and Flambeau must have passed their camp on the river in the night, ambushed them, and thinking that they had somehow run the rapids, gone on, searching for their supper fire.

"Now, Blaise, what do you think of your friends who wanted to give you a job?" demanded Red.

Blaise grimaced as he fingered his bandaged head. "I t'ink if I ambush cano' in dose rapids, I make bettar job. At less dan hunder yard dey start to fire at t'ree men who got to stand up and make good target. Dey shoot eight-ten time and get two hit."

"They shot straight enough to satisfy me," said Finlay. "I thought we'd lost you when you went down. If they'd wiped us out, there'd have been three more reported accidentally drowned and no proof to the contrary."

The half-breed's eyes blazed with such fury that his friends gaped in surprise. "We head for plenty trouble!" he bit off between his teeth.

"Mebbe we navare come back! Who know? But wan t'ing you promise Blaise Brassard! You give dis Batoche to me! I take him in dese han'—so!"

Brassard's thick fingers reached into the air and clamped shut, as if on a throat.

"He's yours, Blaise! But he's only a tool," said Garry. "What puzzles me is his boss. I can't make out Isadore's game. He must have brains to make such a success of the fur business and yet he's riding straight for a fall with the authorities."

"He's got a rich placer strike, somewhere, and to avoid a stampede of prospectors won't register it until he's skimmed off the cream," insisted Red.

"Wal, now we feel bettar, we go have look at M'sieu Isadore," grunted Blaise. He drew a villainous looking skinning knife from its sheath and tested its edge with a thick thumb, as he said: "Somebody goin' to pay for my sore head, for sure!"

"I'm glad I'm not the fellow, you old wolverine!" laughed Garry. "When you take the war path, there's blood on the moon."

CHAPTER IV

Ten days later the Peterboro was approaching the head of Matagami Lake, flanked by black spruce ridges which rolled away to the horizon. Finlay had intended to stop at the Hudson's Bay post which his map showed was located somewhere on its irregular north shore. But, as it was hidden in a deep bay, the survey party had passed the fur post.

"Do we go on up the inlet to this Lake Olga," asked Red, "or turn back to hunt for the Hudson's Bay outfit?"

"We must be pretty close to the thoroughfare, now," said Garry, examining his map. "We've lost ten days already. According to the map the post is thirty miles back of us behind a bunch of islands. We'll keep going."

"Good! Waswanipi and Isadore, or bust! is my motto," laughed Red.

"Was that the flash of a paddle up there where the lake suddenly narrows?" demanded Garry.

The three men stopped paddling to focus their eyes on the distant water.

"Cano' leave de inlet for sure!" announced Blaise, his black eyes narrowing to slits as he watched.

"We make talk wid dem Injun. Mebbe dey know somet'ing."

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

Dean of The Moody Bible Institute of Chicago.

JAMES TEACHES CONSISTENT CHRISTIAN LIVING

LESSON TEXT—James 1:17-22; 2:14-17; 4:13-17; 5:12.

GOLDEN TEXT—Pure religion and undefiled before God and the Father is this, To visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction, and to keep himself unspotted from the world.—James 1:27.

Spiritually minded but very practical was James, an outstanding leader in the Church (Gal. 2:9; Acts 15) and the brother of our Lord. His epistle speaks little about Christ, but it reflects more of His teachings than any of the other epistles. It parallels the sermon on the mount and in that way, as well as other ways, greatly resembles the teachings of Jesus. It is a straightforward discussion of practical Christian living.

There is so much inconsistency among Christians in their daily walk that nothing could be more needed than a careful study of the exhortations of James.

I. Be Doers of the Word—Not Hearers Only (1:17-22).

Knowing God's will is important, but it amounts to little except to bring condemnation upon us, unless we do it. It is good to hear with swift apprehension, but there is no point in talking about what we have heard unless we practice it.

God is the "giver of every good and perfect gift" (that's literally and wonderfully true). He has not withheld one blessing, even to the giving of His Son, who was sent down from heaven to redeem us.

His very goodness should prompt us to lay aside everything which dishonors His name. Wrath (v. 20), all uncleanness of speech or thought, pride (v. 21)—all these must go, and will go, as we permit the Word to take root (be "engrafted") in our hearts and lives. Note that it is not enough to read the Word, or even to memorize it. It must take root and grow in our life.

II. Believe—But Do Not Forget to Work (2:14-17).

Saved by faith? Yes, we are, and in no other way; but the man who says he has faith in Christ will inevitably show the results of that faith in his life.

James is not in any way contradicting the teaching of Paul's epistles regarding justification by faith, but is clearly stating what must be true, "that a faith which does not result in works, i. e., in a manifestation of a true Christian life, externally and visibly, is not the kind of faith commanded by God, and constantly revealed in the New Testament as the only instrument for the appropriation of the redemption that is in Jesus Christ our Lord. There is no such thing as real, genuine, vital, living, Christian faith, except it has its fruits in the works of faith" (Wilbur M. Smith).

How that faith will show itself in the practical dealings of daily life is graphically presented in verses 15 and 16. Pious talk has always been very cheap, and it certainly accomplishes nothing. Real Christianity works.

III. Trust—But Do Not Boast of Tomorrow (4:13-17).

There is a strange religious attitude which talks about faith as though it were something of which to boast, which encourages people not only to believe, but actually to presume. There is a radical difference between faith and presumption.

All Christians are subject to the temptation of talking about being "strangers and pilgrims" (Heb. 11:13) in this earth, and then planning their lives and their business as though everything will continue as it is through all eternity. It is right to plan, but every day we should plan subject to God's will, always realizing that this may be the day when we shall be called into His presence to give an account of the deeds done in the flesh.

Every hour of life should find us ready to meet the Lord, and with all in readiness, so that our going may leave behind a clear testimony of faith in God, and of consistent Christian living.

IV. Be Honest—Without the Need of an Oath (5:12).

A Christian should never need to give an oath in the ordinary affairs of daily life. His life should be so transparently honest and consistently aboveboard that his word ("yea, yea, or nay, nay") will be "as good as his bond."

The Jews were accustomed to use formulas for oaths such as those mentioned in Matthew 5:33-37. They would have felt much at home in our day when there is so much dishonesty that people are constantly calling on God to witness to their truthfulness. Those who have least to do with Him and the worst records for dishonesty are most prone to thus seek to bolster their word.

What a striking contrast is the simple "yes" or "no" of the true Christian. Let us make our word always good, because it is the expression of the integrity of our lives.

Any business to be permanently successful must be founded on principles of honesty and fair dealing and full value for the price asked. From these there can be no deviation, regardless of economics or any other conditions.

Every successful business in the United States, the ones that have started from a small beginning, and have endured year after year, are built on an ideal. That ideal has always included a self imposed obligation to keep faith with the public by maintaining quality and service the year around regardless of conditions.

The Crown Burial Vault Co. started with an ideal. Through good and bad that ideal has never been violated. To it all subsequent success must be credited.

Here the public has at its disposal the services of people who possess the knowledge and who obtained their modern business education in the school of practical experience. From the inception of the enterprise, quality has been maintained from the beginning.

The Crown Burial Vault Co. is a local concern under competent management of people interested in local development and the firm's substantial and well merited progress is a matter of actual fact well known to the public, we recommend them to all our readers.

It is truly a tribute to the business sagacity of the management that actuates them to give us this wonderful aerial field. The business is conducted along progressive lines and we are proud to say that it is a credit to the commercial life of this county.

Here is your local grocery and market with the interest of your home and county at heart.

To be able to make certain of getting the best of fresh meats, groceries and allied products is a great boon to any community. This is the place where the highest quality prevails at the lowest possible cost.

The public is thus assured of a grocery and market of the very highest grade right here at home and thus it merits the consideration and liberal support of both farmers and townfolk.

There is a great deal more to the business of conducting a first class grocery and market than the average man understands. This is an essential business that requires at its head a man of experience and who is familiar with the details and the necessity for adequate supplies. It is such houses as this one that add to the convenience of the farmer and provide good provisions.

The story of the success of the firm is one that many business men would find profitable reading. This firm began its career with the firm belief that success could be obtained by furnishing first class supplies upon a reasonable margin of profit. (With this method in mind it proceeded upon its career upon the solid foundation of good values and reasonable prices. As their trade increased and the business flourished they expanded until it now is one of the leading stores of the county.)

The Smilde's Food Market is in the hands of men thoroughly conversant with the general business conditions of the country, and of wide experience in the buying world, familiar with retail trade conditions, therefore this firm has become one of the most valued of our commercial and agricultural assets.

FREE DELIVERY SERVICE
3316 W. 95th St. Evergreen Park Phone 7260

One of Evergreen Park's leading stores feature a complete line of meats and groceries and fresh vegetables and fruit in season.

They employ a force of clerks, each one of whom is a genius in doing and saying the accommodating thing to their customer. It is the rule and principle of their business to do more for their customers than simply sell them groceries and their customers appreciate this almost as much as they do the high quality of groceries and meats offered from day to day.

The Ralph Church Food Mart gives special inducements to out-of-town customers and they handle a full and complete line of staple and fancy groceries of standard brands and are always first with fresh fruits in season and country produce. Their stocks of canned goods are always of the best brand and are always kept fresh.

Being large dealers they purchase in such large quantities that they are able to undersell many similar concerns, and their customers reap the benefit of their increased buying power.

Mr. Ralph Church is popular and has won the admiration and friendship of the entire community and in this review of 1941 we are glad to compliment the Ralph Church Food Mart on the part they are taking in the life of our community and recommend them to all of our readers.

WHITE PHARMACY

"H. H. White, R. Ph."
3300 W. 95th St. --Your Doctor is Our Reference -- Evergreen Park 7676

They have a full line of drugs, druggist sundries and practically every proprietary medicine known. These are all secured from the very best houses and are pure and tested. The fact that the management had a thorough training in the profession makes them very careful in the filling of all prescriptions to see that the compounding is correctly done, proper directions are attached and everything is exact. This department is highly recommended by the physicians and well patronized by people for many miles.

They specialize in the carrying of standard goods which are known the country over. No matter whether it is a proprietary medicine, perfumes, toilet articles, or any of the other specialties you will find on it the stamp of a well known manufacturer who stands behind the products as does also the store. Cigars, candies and specialties as well as the long line of druggist sundries are here furnished the public with the most accommodating service. The manager is one of those genial and whole souled personalities who dispense good cheer on all occasions.

The prescription department, is under able management and the most careful attention is given to this end of the business, for of all branches of a drug store this is one of the most important because of the fact that the lives of so many people are dependent on the compounds.

Special mention should be made of their soda fountain where they dispense only the best.

We are glad to compliment this modern store as a business and professional concern and firm which is right abreast of the time both in the way of appointment and stock.

IS EYESTRAIN Holding You Back?

EYESTRAIN because it saps your energy—hampers your efficiency at work and leads to costly errors. When you realize that NOTHING is so indispensable . . . so utterly vital to you as your good eyesight . . . and that delay in relieving eyestrain can cause serious and permanent damage to your eyes, don't you think it advisable that you should have a periodical eye examination at least once a year? Certainly your eye condition is one thing you should KNOW about beyond all questioning. Arrange an appointment now.

RACEWAY NEWS

Tony Willman of Milwaukee will be one of the marked drivers Saturday night at Raceway Park, 129 St. and Ashland Ave., when he reports for midget auto racing in his fast new No. 1 Offenhauser.

Willman, also a big-car driving ace, is one of the few pilots who have been able to break through the monopoly Tony Bettenhausen of Tinley Park and Myron Fohr have held on Raceway main event honors. He won the 30 lap feature contest last Saturday evening. Bettenhausen was out after the elimination test on account of mechanical trouble. Fohr did not compete. Thus the two leaders are still in the same relative position in the point ratings as before the Saturday meet. The Milwaukee star has been driving midgets since the introduction of the sport in Chicago in 1934 and has been a consistent winner in both small and big car racing over a period of years. He has competed in a number of Indianapolis 500 mile races.

Bettenhausen and Fohr have been engaging in a series of speed duels on Wednesday and Saturday nights at the quarter mile track for the lead in the point standing for the season title, now held by the former by a narrow margin.

Other drivers who will strive to retain their point ratings in the midweek and week-end races are: Jimmy Caris, Mike O'Halloran, Ted Duncan, Bob Muhlke, Emil Andres, Eddie Kracke, Frank Buraney, Harry Hart, Harry Lewis, Pete Romevich, Dan Kladis, Shorty Sorenson, Al Sprang, Swede Johnson and Pete Nielsen.

Bettenhausen has won four feature events since the opening of the season, while Fohr has taken an equal number but has not fared as well as Tony in the handicaps and qualifying tests which also count in the computation of points. Willman has won three main events.

Twelve will qualify on Wednesday, and Saturday nights in four reverse order eliminations at 10 laps each for the 30 lap main event. Non-qualifiers on each evening will compete in 15 laps consolation and handicaps at 15 laps are also scheduled with the eight fastest cars in the trials eligible to compete.

Time trials on both evenings are set for 7:30 p.m. and the first race for 8:30 p.m.

Horseradish Sauce Accents Savory Salmon

Savory steamed salmon served with pungent horseradish sauce is a very old favorite entree. Years ago, when our forefathers had occasion to celebrate the possession of a salmon, they most often prepared it by carefully sewing the fish in a cheesecloth, cooking it in a fish kettle and, finally, serving it at the feast accompanied and accented by horseradish sauce. Modern homemakers are more fortunate in that canned salmon—which is fresh-caught, ready-cooked salmon sealed in cans—makes it possible to serve such a festive seafood dinner any time, quickly and economically. For this simple hot service, the canned salmon is best heated in the oven in a covered casserole dish or in a double boiler.

The rich color of the salmon flakes is in pleasing contrast to a green vegetable such as buttered fresh asparagus. An economical company menu built around salmon with horseradish sauce follows:

SALMON WITH HORSE RADISH SAUCE
BUTTERED FRESH ASPARAGUS
AU GRATIN POTATOES
HOT ROLLS
APPLE COBBLER
COFFEE
CREAM AND SUGAR

HORSE RADISH SAUCE FOR CANNED SALMON
(A one pound can of salmon serves 4 persons)
1/4 cup horseradish 2 tablespoons sugar
2 tablespoons lemon 1/4 teaspoon mustard juice 1/4 cup whipped cream
Mix horseradish and seasonings. Fold in the cream before serving.

Today's popularity of Doan's Pills, after many years of world-wide use, surely must be accepted as evidence of satisfactory use. And favorable public opinion supports that of the able physicians who test the value of Doan's under exacting laboratory conditions. These physicians, too, approve every word of advertising you read, the objective of which is only to recommend Doan's Pills as a good diuretic treatment for disorder of the kidney function and for relief of the pain and worry it causes. If more people were aware of how the kidneys must constantly remove waste that cannot stay in the blood without injury to health, there would be better understanding of why the whole body suffers when kidneys lag, and diuretic medication would be more often employed. Burning, scanty or too frequent urination sometimes warn of disturbed kidney function. You may suffer nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—feel weak, nervous, all played out. Use Doan's Pills. It is better to rely on a medicine that has won world-wide acclaim than on something less favorably known. Ask your neighbor!
